Academic Year: 2012 / 2013 English Mock Exam N°2

Duration: 2 hours

The defining feature of distance learning is that you do not need to attend the awarding university institution in person. This style of study is not new. The University of London established its external programme in 1858 to make the degree accessible to students who, for one reason or another, could not come to London to study, and it now offers a range of undergraduate and postgraduate qualifications to almost 24,500 students in over 157 countries around the world. Now, a growing number of other UK institutions are developing distance learning programmes to offer students the chance of studying without leaving home. Distance learning suits people for many different reasons. For Petrakis, "Family and financial circumstances prevent me from studying abroad for extended periods, but I could manage a couple of short visits." For Teresa, "I now have two small children, it is impossible for me to attend University. I would, therefore, like to study at home."

- Finding the finance to study may be difficult, "Due to financial constraints, I could not further my education in any conventional way; and so I joined the bank, my present employer. My ambition is to improve my career prospects by obtaining a university degree," said George Morgan.
- For some people whose job requires regular travel or irregular working hours, distance learning may be the only way to improve their qualifications and seek promotion. In most cases, students have the choice of when to study and how quickly they progress through the programme.
- Academic support given to a distance learning student varies from programme to programme and from institution to institution; however, the focus is on self-study. Students may receive basic academic guidance through specially written study guides. Many programmes provide an extensive range of materials including videos, computer disks and audio tapes. Some institutions have introduced programmes of study which can be delivered to a student's home by Internet.

Academic support is not the only support required. Without the support of family, colleagues and friends, studying for a qualification as an external student would be a great deal harder. John Chetcuti says, "my wife's support throughout all these years has been precious. Had it not been for her support when I was down in the dumps I probably would not have persevered to the end."

III WRITING (10 points)

Nowadays learning foreign languages has become a booming industry which has attracted a lot of investors as well as many people who either try to learn other languages or specialize in that sector as researchers.

Try to write an essay in which you list the benefits of learning foreign languages and the best way to do that.
